VICE PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Sort but to the Point—He Briefly States Duties of Presiding Officer in Senate.

Washington, March 4.—The inaugural address of Vice President Sherman.

Senators: There is no need to recite the history of this great legislative body, proud of it though we be, nor yet to suggest methods which might in coming time enhance its usefulness. The world knows the one and you understand the other.

In a government for and by the people the necessity of clearly defining the rights and limitations of the several branches thereof is manifest. A hundred years has demonstrated the far-sightedness and wisdom of the framers of that instrument which has furnished the foundation of our legislative action. The vice president is not one of the makers of the law. His duties are rather to regulate in this body the method of making them, to regulate, not in accord with his will and ideas, but in accord with rules which you yourselves have established. It is for the presiding officer to require you to act in conformity with your self-imposed regulations, just as it is the

THE INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT W. H. TAFT

A Heavy Snow Storm Causes Scene of Inauguration to be Held in the Senate Chamber.

Washington, March 4.—The first Chief Executive to take the oath of office in the chamber of the senate in seventy-six years, William Howard Taft, today became President of the United States.

Accompanied to the Capitol by President Roosevelt and a guard of honor, through a swirl of blinding snow, Mr. Taft returned to the White house just as the sun began to force its way through the thinning clouds of gray.

Blizzard Overrides Weather Bureau.

A sudden blizzard, sweeping in from the Northwest last night, to set away the Weather Bureau's optimistic prediction of "fair and clear weather," caused an abandonment of the outdoor ceremonies on the fam-

Outside the capitol the retiring Chief Executive was met by 200 members of the New York county committee, and under their escort was driven to the union station, a short three blocks away. A band at the head of the column playing "Auld Lang Syne" told the story of the march, and Mr. Roosevelt was compelled again and again to acknowledge the cheers from the throngs which lined the way.

There was a wait of nearly two hours at the station, during which Mr. Roosevelt held an impromptu reception in the presidential suite. Many of his old friends among the diplomatic corps sought him there for a final word of farewell.

Roosevelt at Train Thousands Cheer.

As he made his way to the train, shortly after 3 o'clock, Mr. Roosevelt was cheered by thousands. To all with whom he spoke Mr. Roosevelt declared that while he had "had a bully time" while president, he was glad to lay down the duties of office. He paid tribute to his successor, and especially commented upon the latter's effort.

Mrs. Taft Center of Interest at Ball.

President and Mrs. Taft were the centers of interest at the culminating feature of the memorable day—the inaugural ball—in the Pension building. The scene in the vast cavern of the building, which had been transformed into a canopied court of ivory and white, was another of the brilliant pictures which are quadrennially painted here by the gathering of a vast and brilliant assemblage from every section of the country. With all the color and movement of a military spectacle, with the softening influence of delicately tinted gowns and the interest seldom equaled at a social function, the inaugural ball holds a place unique in the history-making of the day.

Outdoor Celebration Ends with Fire-Works.

While the ball was in progress indoors a display of fireworks on the monument to the rear of the White House marked the end of the outdoor celebration. For hours the thinly clouded heavens were alight with screaming rockets, with sun clusters that challenged the brilliance of day, with fiery "cobras" and all the fantastic creations of modern pyrotechnical skill. Aerial salutes, floated festoons, illuminated balloons and scores of other features made the display visible from one end of the Capitol City to the other.

Leaves Inaugural Ball Late.

Mr. Taft's day was one of continuing cheers and plaudits from the moment he first appeared on the White House portico to go to his inauguration until he returned late tonight, an unwilling leave taker from the dancing and the national promenade of the inaugural ball.

Guests of Roosevelts.

Mr. and Mrs. Taft were the guests of the Roosevelts at the White house last night, setting a new precedent in the courtesies of the executive mansion, as they did again today when Mrs. Taft accompanied the newly made president and Mr. Sherman, the new vice president, from the capitol at the head of the imposing parade, to the White house.

Indulge in Repartee.

"I knew it would be a cold lay when I was made president of the United States," exclaimed Mr. Taft.

"And I knew there would be a blizzard clear up to the moment I went out of office," rejoined President Roosevelt.

Despite his unflinching good humor, Mr. Taft was deeply disappointed when, upon arriving at the Capitol shortly after 11 o'clock, he found that the committee on arrangements

INAUGURAL ADDRESS DELIVERED BY TAFT

WILL CARRY OUT THE POLICIES OF EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Following are the main points of the inaugural address delivered by President Taft:

To secure the needed speed in the passage of the tariff bill, it would seem wise to attempt no other legislation at the extra session.

A permanent improvement, like the Panama Canal, should be treated as a distinct enterprise, and should be paid for by the proceeds of bonds, the issue of which will distribute its cost between the present and future generations in accordance with the benefits derived.

Our fortifications are yet in a state of only partial completeness, and the number of men to man them is insufficient.

A modern navy can not be improvised. It must be built and in existence when the emergency arises which calls for its use and operation. Our international policy is always to promote peace.

Our government is able to afford a suitable army and a suitable navy. By proper legislation we may, and ought to place in the hands of the federal executive the means of enforcing the treaty rights of aliens in the courts of the federal government.

The governments of our dependencies in Porto Rico and the Philippines are progressing as favorably as could be desired.

I look forward with hope to increasing the already good feeling between the south and the other sections of the country. My chief purpose is not to effect a change in the electoral vote of the Southern states. That is a secondary consideration.

The danger of the control of an ignorant electorate has passed. The colored men must base their had practically abandoned all hope of an outdoor ceremony.

Taft Disappointed.

Mr. Taft said that he was anxious that the great American people represented in the throngs which gathered everywhere in the capitol plaza should have their usual share in and view of the inauguration. It was deemed dangerous, however, to force upon the venerable members of the supreme court, the senate and the diplomatic corps the jeopardy of long exposure to the fury of the elements, and the president-elect finally acquiesced in the change of program.

Ardmore, Ok., March 4.—Hosea Townsend, who was federal judge for the Southern district of Indian Territory for ten years prior to the admission of Oklahoma to statehood, died suddenly at his home in this city this afternoon from heart trouble. He was one of the most popular men sent to preside over the federal courts in this country.
Previous to his appointment as federal judge here in 1897 by President McKinley, he served as United States congressman from Colorado. He was re-appointed judge by President Roosevelt in 1901, and again in 1905, serving until his office was abolished with the admission of Oklahoma to statehood. Following the brilliant and impressive ceremonies in the senate, during which both the president and vice president took the oath of office President Roosevelt—again a private citizen—bade an affectionate adieu to his successor, while all in the historic chamber looked on in silence and then passed away through a side door to take the train for New York. As he passed through the senate chamber Mr. Roosevelt was given an ovation quite equal to that tendered to the new president.

OKLAHOMA COUNTY TAX LEVY

Guthrie, Okla., March 4.—According to a statement issued by State Examiner and Inspector Taylor there have been large reductions in the tax levies of nearly every county of the state, in compliance with the terms of House bill No. 1, passed early in January. Work of checking the counties of Caddo, Creek, Haskell, Johnson, Logan, Pawnee, Payne and Washita has not been completed. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT LEAVES WASHINGTON

Bids the Thousands Who Witness His Departure a Happy Farewell.

Washington, March 4.—With thousands of his countrymen bidding him an affectionate adieu, Theodore Roosevelt took his departure from the National capitol for his Oyster Bay home at 3:40 o'clock this afternoon. As he was leaving the scene of seven years of strenuous activity, Mr. Roosevelt gave every indication of delight over being relieved of official cares. Looking somewhat tired but happy, the former President was deeply moved by the affectionate demonstration in his honor while waiting for his train at the station.

Roosevelt's Farewell.

"Goodbye and good luck to you," were his farewell greetings to the thousands who witnessed his departure. It was a magnificent spectacle when the great crowd waived handkerchiefs in unison and shouted "Good-bye Teddy."

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt occupied a drawing room on the sleeping car "City."

All the way from the capitol to the union station, where he arrived at 1:50 p. m. Mr. Roosevelt, escorted by the New York County Republican Committee, 800 strong, received a tremendous ovation, which he greatly appreciated. A band played "Auld Lang Syne."

"What's the matter with Teddy?" shouted Representative Herbert Parsons of New York, who headed the escort. "He's all right," answered the crowd, and three cheers followed. Addressing the escort, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I want to thank you heartily for escorting me down to the station, and let me say to you how much I appreciate your courtesy. Good-bye and good luck to all."

Impromptu Reception.

Then Mr. Roosevelt, who was preceded to the station by Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, held an impromptu reception in the president's private room at the depot. All of his former Cabinet officers, members of the diplomatic corps, officials and other admiring friends came there and bade him farewell. Mr. Roosevelt in conversation with friends, declared he was glad to give up his arduous duties.

"My, that was an inaugural address

Wheat Brings $1.07.

Red Rock, Okla., March 4.—Will Collier, a Glencoe farmer, got in at the finish of the advance prices of wheat. He has sold several thousand bushels and sold all except 3,000 at a low price in the fall. Last week he sold the balance on hand to Donahoe Brothers at Red Rock and parties at Oklahoma City for $1.04 and $1.07, the latter being the highest price ever paid for wheat here.

Prominent Citizens of Durant Dead.

Durant, Ok., March 4.—Pere Durant, one of the most prominent residents of Bryan county, died at his home in Durant today, after suffering from Paralysis and typhoid fever for three weeks. Deceased was a brother of W. A. Durant, a member of the Oklahoma legislature, and a nephew of the late Dixon Durant, founder of this city. The funeral will take place here tomorrow.

Col. Thomas D. Taliaferro died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Z. C. Dobson, in this city today, aged 77 years. Old age was the cause of his demise. Deceased was a confederate veteran, being Colonel of the Twentieth Texas Cavalry and serving with distinction throughout the war. He was a native of Virginia, a graduate of the Military University of that state. He came to Texas in 1856. The remains will be shipped to Madill, Ok., tomorrow, where interment will occur Saturday morning.

DEATH RATE IS GREAT.

Lives Lost in Almost Every District in Oklahoma.

Wilburton, Okla., March 4.—During the past sixty days, the death rate in coal mining districts of Oklahoma has been something appalling. Scarcely a day goes by without the news of some new disaster in some of which from one to five men have lost their lives. As an illustration of alleged criminal carelessness upon the part of the mine operators and the alleged criminal neglect of the mine inspectors the accidents Sunday night in the Reed coal mines of Adamson, this county, furnished a striking illustration.

It is alleged that two years ago, Peter Adamson, operating mines at the town of Adamson, purchased a worn out and discarded engine from some source, for the principal reason that it was cheap. After using it some months with continual dissatisfaction, several engineers quitting the job because of the danger to the men below, he discarded it as worthless. Then the Reed Coal company came in and secured it.

Sunday evening three men who were being let down in the mine were killed because the pin refused to hold and the cars ran away.

These three men left three wives and eighteen children, who are absolutely destitute. Three children of one of the dead men are blind and helpless. The widows and orphans, of course, have refuge in the courts, but when the attorney gets his, there will be little if any left for those really needing the assistance.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

Guthrie, March 4.—A charter was issued today to the Confederate Veterans Home Association of Oklahoma. Col. A. P. Watson and other prominent men of the state are the incorporators and it is the intention to build a home on the cottage plan. The location has not been determined and the committee will select the city offering the best inducements.

Col. Bill Cross is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. W. T. Culberson, president of the Oklahoma Division of the Daughters of the Confederacy, in which she appoints a committee to assist in selecting a location. The committee is composed as follows: Mrs. T. C. Harroll, Wagoner; Mrs. W. R. Clement, Oklahoma City; Mrs. T. D. Davis, McAlester; Mrs. K. T. Bass, Lawton; Mrs. Lewis Paulina, Durant.

Guthrie, Okla., March 4.—A prominent republican member of the house of representatives, while discussing the gross tax bill on the floor of the house, paid a glowing tribute to the Oklahoma Corporation commission declaring it to be the best body of its kind the world has ever known.

TWO BOYS ATTEMPT SUICIDE.

One Is Dead, the Other in Jail in Ardmore.

Ardmore, Okla., March 4.—Joe Wolfenbarger, a young man whose home was at Marietta, Okla., ended his life in a rooming house here late this afternoon by swallowing the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

Wolfenbarger, with Elmer Finley of Ardmore, both of whom were said to be intoxicated, entered into a compact to end their lives. Both young men purchased poison, but friends of Finley upon learning of his intentions, took the poison from him. Finley then was placed under arrest and lodged in jail. While being placed in prison Finley seized the officer's gun and attempted to shoot himself in an effort to carry out his part of the suicide compact.

Wolfenbarger's body will be taken to Marietta where his people reside.

Governor Signs Child Labor Bill.

Guthrie, Okla., March 4.—Gov. Haskell has signed the Franklin Child Labor bill, and another famous and much worked for measure is added to the Oklahoma laws of merit. For this bill Senator Franklin has worked through two sessions of the legislature. He passed such a measure through the first session, but Governor Haskell vetoed it on technical grounds.

Hail Kills Quail.

Visited his farm near here last week and reports that the rainstorm that swept through that locality was a fierce one. He picked up a number of quails that had been killed by the hail, and it is thought that hundreds of birds met their death in the storm. A calf belonging to Louis Tullins was killed, and all stock suffered severely.

ATCHISON FOUND GUILTY.

Farmer Gets Life Imprisonment for the Killing of Merle Anderson.

El Reno, Okla., March 4.—After being out about an hour, the jury in the Atchison murder case, brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree and recommended life imprisonment. The case was stubbornly fought from the beginning and since the killing great excitement has prevailed throughout Canadian county. The court room has been crowded each day of the trial and much feeling has been in evidence.

Dave Atchison, farmer, and father of four little children, was tried for the slaying of Merle Anderson last October on the former's farm. The plea was self defense, Atchison claiming that Anderson assaulted his wife and would have killed both of them perhaps had he not interfered.

duty of the supreme court to determine if your action is in accord with the constitution. Two decades of service in this capitol, though not in this chamber, have impressed me with the weight of senatorial responsibility and the value of senatorial duty well done. It is neither well to minimize the former nor exaggerate the latter, but to have both ever in mind.

I am aware that the great burden is on your shoulders, not mine. I do not, however, fail to realize that I have duties to perform which require industry, a clear mind and controlled temper. I shall strive to perform such duties with courtesy, impartiality and fairness.

I am inducted into the vice presidency with appreciation of the dignity and honor of the lofty place and with pleasurable anticipation of close association with men of high ideals and patriotic purpose.

I accept, sir, from your hand the gavel with the earnest hope that I may measure up to the standard you have set, and, if I do, I feel that I shall have met the expectations of the most exacting.

WAIL OF THE RICH

MAN WITH LARGE INCOME HAS HIS TROUBLES.

Supposed by All to Be Dwelling on the Sunny Side of Easy Street Yet He is Constantly in Debt.

Pity the poor man who has an income of six or eight or ten thousand dollars a year. He has more worries than the man who works for three dollars a day. One of these poor men whose salary is eight thousand was telling his woes to a friend the other day.

"Poor," said he, "I'm as poor as a church mouse. Even if I do get eight thousand a year, I'm in debt, and I've been in debt ever since I can remember. I never have been able to catch up. The general public thinks that a man with an income of twenty-five or thirty dollars a day is blessed. But they haven't an idea of how he is hemmed in and hampered and held in thrall by the very fact that he has an income of that amount.

"Take my daughter's case, for instance. Of course she must have a fine education and every advantage that a father who makes as much money as I do can provide. Did it ever occur to you how much it costs to afford such advantages to a young lady of eighteen or nineteen? I sent my daughter to Vassar, and, as befitting a girl of her age and station in life, I rigged her out with a complete equipment in the way of dress. What do you suppose that girl did? Within two months she put on 23 pounds in weight. Not a thing in her wardrobe would fit her. Well, my wife bought a new outfit complete for her. That girl of ours came home for the Christmas holidays, a few weeks later, with most of her garments held together by strings. She had outgrown even the second lot. Now, I've got to buy a third outfit for her.

"Then there's that young hopeful who's my son and heir—a fine, bright youngster and the joy of the household. He had a minor sort of an ailment lately and it was necessary to perform a slight operation. I have a brother who is the chief examiner in one of the large life insurance companies. He is a bachelor, and he thinks a great deal of my boy. When he heard that my son would have to have an operation he insisted that none but the very best surgeons should have the case. So we got the best surgeon in the city. On account of my brother's position and influence we got him at half rates. We also had several eminent gentlemen in consultation. They charged only half the regular rate. The operation required the administration of ether. My brother, from his long experience, did not deem it safe to have the anesthetic administered without having my son's heart examined first by a noted heart specialist. He only charged half price. Then my brother would not consent to having the ether given except by a specialist in that line, and of course we had to have the most expert and accomplished of trained nurses. They were the only ones who charged full price.

"My boy's heart was all right. I am delighted to know it on such eminent authority. But I'm afraid mine is not. It has been weak ever since I received those 'half price' bills.

"These are only some of the minor troubles of the poor man who has but eight thousand a year income."

Bright Idea Went Wrong.

The keeper of one of the large hotels in Paris frequented by the poorer classes of guests recently determined to smoke out with sulphur a couple who would not pay their bills and would not leave. Unluckily, the fumes penetrated to the rest of the building. Exit by the front door was impossible, as the landlord had locked it, and, being stupefied by the fumes, could not remember where he had put the key. The fire brigade eventually arrived and rescued the choking guests, including the offending couple. Now not only those two guests have gone, but many of the others as well, who also have not paid their rents.

Too Much.

"Do you think that Miss Kidder was having fun with me?" asked Chawley. "Well, old chap, give me the details," was Awhur's response. "You see, I had my bull terrier with me. And I said to her, 'That dog knows as much as I do.' And she said 'Don't you think $4.50 was too much for him.'"

Works Well in Other Cases.

Father—I am going to have my children learn Esperanto.
Friend—Is that so? Then I will give you a little advice good for one who wants to learn the new language: Go to the country in which the language is spoken.

Scientifically Studied.

"So there is a war cloud hovering over Europe?" said the diplomat. "Yes," answered the weather expert. "But it's the usual sort. It contains possibilities of atmospheric agitation, but no real thunder and lightning."

The Wise Father.

"I should like to marry your daughter, sir," said the young man. "All right," replied the old man. "Let's get down to business. I'm not going to ask 'Can you support her?' but 'Will you?' That's what I want to know?"—Detroit Free Press.

ADA LOSES; DURANT GETS THE NORMAL

Durant Receives More Than Double the Votes of Ada—Now Ready for the Governor.

A telephone message from Hon. Edgar Rattiff just as the News goes to press affords the report of the fact that Ada has finally lost the state normal for all and aye.

Durant's friends forced the vote this afternoon, the same resulting in Durant being awarded the school by the decisive vote of twenty-one (21) for Durant to ten (10) for Ada.

All the republicans voted for Durant except Senator Cunningham of Guthrie.

COUNTY FAIR.

The Pontotoc County Fair was played by home talent last evening under the auspices of the Rebecca lodge to a crowded house at the DeSota theater. The show was well received and the young ladies and members of the Rebeccas are to be congratulated on the funny production and splendid portrayal of what might occur at a county fair.

All the characters participating did superbly.

Especially mentioned is deserved in behalf of all, but space and time forbidding, only the exceptionally well received renditions of the songs by pretty little Pauline Jones of the Harris hotel and gentlemanly young Clay Vaden at the First National Bank. Each in turn was called back by the audience by vociferous cheering.

Affinity With Ahab.

By Rev. S. E. Wishard, D.D.

There are politics and politics. The profession of the politician is old, and has been worked with persistent intrigue, and not infrequently with results quite unexpected. Kings and princes have met with some healthy surprises in their method of working statecraft.

The good King Jehoshaphat had an unexpected experience in his political play with Ahab. He had a good start in his royal career. He had a valuable heredity from his father. Asa turned the kingdom over to his son in good condition, and the son began well. He had no business to begin otherwise. Asa had heard the message of the prophet. He had believed and had put away the abominable idolatry of the heathen, had renewed the altar of Jehovah, had offered the sacrifices required and covenanted anew with God. Jehoshaphat came into this noble inheritance, and took up the responsibilities of government. He wisely distributed his defensive forces, and "sought the Jehovah God of his father"; and God established the kingdom in his hand. The people responded patriotically, bringing him riches and honor. He proceeded further in the destruction of the idols that had cursed the nation, introducing religious teachers. His power and wealth increased and finally became a snare to him. "Now Jehoshaphat had riches and honor in abundance, and joined affinity with Ahab," by taking Athalia, Ahab's daughter, in marriage to his son Jehoram.

The deadly plague of politics struck the king at the zenith of his power and glory. He would strengthen his kingdom by a political marriage with the family of one of the worst men that ever sat on the throne of Israel. Jehoshaphat could not have been ignorant of the crimes of Ahab, of the unavenged blood that stained his life, and the cloud charged with judgment that hung over his kingdom. And yet with a strange forgetfulness of what God had wrought for him, of the perils of such an unholy alliance, he undertook to strengthen his throne by planting moral dynamite beneath it.

The marriage of Jehoram to Athalia involved certain social amenities, that must be recognized and fulfilled. That political blunder was the mistake of Jehoshaphat's life. It entailed other blunders, even imperiling his life. Mistakes do not usually travel alone. They go in troops. They never reveal the end from the beginning. The son that captures the unwary comes handsomely attired, with all consequences artfully concealed. Having taken the first step, formed the alliance; having gained affinity with Ahab, Jehoshaphat must visit his new-found ally. And the shrewd Ahab knew how to make the most of the occasion. He made a splendid feast for the coming visitor and his attendants, and when they had eaten to the utmost good nature, he set forth his important proposition before Jehoshaphat. There was a matter-of-fact business back of the proposition. There was a serious conflict looming up in the future between Ahab and the King of Syria, and about to come to an issue over at Ramoth-gilead. Ahab was anxious to secure an investment of Judean blood in the coming battle. Hence when all appetite had been appeased, and the sense of the obligation of the guests was duly impressed, Ahab asked Jehoshaphat: "Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead?" It was but a little way beyond the Jordan, not very distant from Samaria. The trap had been well set for Judah's king, and he stepped into it with both feet. "He answered, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war." It was another sale of himself and people for a mess of pottage. The political marriage and the great feast had entrapped him, had revealed his folly and stained his reputation.

Jehoshaphat had some twinges of conscience at this point of the proceedings, and proposed to make some inquiries of Jehovah as to whether he had made a safe venture. It was unfortunate that he had not made this—full of the facts that make him feel how much the world needs his sacrifice and service; to inspire him with a vision of what it would mean for the whole Church to swing in and rush its banner forward everywhere; to teach him where he can take hold with his own hands and where he can lend power to the hands of somebody else; to bring him up at double quick to the help of the Lord in a sudden emergency; to hold him steady with a constant concern in all the great interests of the incoming kingdom—the Church paper can do this for militant, aggressive Christianity; and nothing else can.

There are other factors in the problem, of course, but roughly, the corporate, co-operative efficiency of a church in big united enterprises will be in proportion to the thoroughness with which religious papers circulate information through its membership.

"Information—that's the real franchise for the religious journal.

"It's all too palpable, however, that the religious press is not doing this solidifying, energizing work very thoroughly in the present-day church. The blame for the failure is twofold:

"The first half of it lies with the papers themselves. They don't live up to their mission. They print too much matter that would be good any time. All the justification of a church periodical publication lies in the matter that wouldn't be as food any other week as it is the week it is printed.

"The second half of the fault lies with local church officers—ministerial and lay. They don't believe a newspaper can be divinely called into the Christian ministry. They consider it represents merely a shrewd human scheme to make money by catering to a certain easily accessible class of readers. Therefore they let it make its way like any other commercial undertaking.

"A generation of Christian ministers and elders who believed in the Christian press as a power to bring in the Kingdom of God would stop the questioning of the world about the use of it.

"As to any one religious journal that you may have in mind—

"If where it goes it makes Christians want to work, help it go farther; if it doesn't do that, have the nerve to help cure or kill it."

When a young wife discovers that she can't keep her piano practice and her husband at the same time she gives up her music.

Religious Insanity.

The newspapers are giving us occasional instances of sudden insanity produced, as is alleged, by religious enthusiasm. Accounts of revival or evangelistic movements are accompanied with the report of cases in which it is said that religious excitement has unsettled the reason of some. Under the influence of the irrational impulse, strange acts of violence have been committed. Perhaps the sufferer has been sent to the insane asylum for proper restraint. In two or three recent instances the community has been shocked by atrocious crimes. And because these things have usually occurred at times of special religious interest in the community, it has been argued that the religious teaching was the cause of them.

In a few cases it may be shown that this is the truth of the matter. There are forms of religious excitement, or excitement produced under the guise of religion, which border upon insanity. But the religion taught under such conditions is itself a form of insanity. It is not the gospel of Christ in any true sense. And the insane delusions or performances produced by it are not chargeable to religion.

Dr. David Starr Jordan has recently put to Dr. A. B. Richardson, an expert alienist, of late in charge of the United States Hospital in Washington, some inquiries as to the relation of religion to insanity. Dr. Richardson's replies ought to set at rest any anxiety as to the effect of genuine religion upon the mind. He wrote to Dr. Jordan: "I have tested the matter thoroughly. There are only two patients in this hospital whose insanity has any relation to religion, and I think, from their predisposition to insanity, that they would probably have become insane on some other subject, if they had not on religion. On the other hand, the good cheer, bright hopes, rich consolation, good tempers, regular habits and glad songs of religion are such an antidote for the causes of insanity that thousands of people in Ohio are preserved from insanity by them. But for the beneficent influence of religion, Ohio would have to double the capacity of her hospitals in order to accommodate her insane patients.

Quite in line with this American testimony is the witness of a little book on Christian Sanity, recently published by an English physician, with the recommendation of the Bishop of Durham. The physician examines the meaning of the Scripture word Be Sober, with a study of various manifestations of evil spiritual power among men, like the demoniacal possessions of scripture time, and concludes that there are possibility and danger of similar evil occurrences in the present time, in extravagant revival methods, which are religiously to be avoided. His practical advice to those concerned in religious activities is, Never surrender consciousness, a sound mind, a good understanding, self-control, a reasonable gentle disposition, and general sanity. There must be sound common-sense in full activity, combined with humility, reverence and submission to God's will. Carefully examine the teaching of any religious leader respecting the Person and work of Christ.

There is wisdom for evangelists and religious workers among ourselves in these suggestions. There are spheres of intellectual judgment and spiritual life where false excitement might unsettle reason. But there is no possibility of insanity in spiritual life, the gift of God is Christ. Nor does any one who sincerely receives Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Lord become insane thereby. The sorrowful instances of aberration which sometimes occur, chargeable, as is alleged, to religious excitement, may not be charged to the simple gospel of Jesus Christ, Healer and Saviour. Rather will that gospel be the healing of many a hurt and troubled mind, the source of peace and perfect soundness of body and spirit which are His.

JURY WANTS COURT TO HURRY UP.

Nashville, March 4.—When court adjourned tonight in the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of former Senator E. W. Carmack, after a day marked by little progress and much wrangling between attorneys, the jury sent word to Judge Hart through a bailiff that "they had a complaint to make." The court called up one of their number—William Hows. The latter said: "Most of the jurors are farmers. The time for spring planting is here. We want to get home. The entire crop for the year depends upon the planting. We feel that there are too many delays and too much argument. We ask the court to hurry things along. We would be glad to have night sessions and work longer during the day. But we want to get through and get through soon."

Judge Hart said he would use every effort to make the case move more rapidly.

The state this afternoon had a post erected at the spot on which stood the second telephone pole at the scene of the tragedy. This pole was cut down soon after the murder. The new pole was erected to get a photograph which the state will try to put before the jury.

VICE PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Port but to the Point—He Briefly States Duties of Presiding Officer in Senate.

Washington, March 4.—The inaugural address of Vice President Sherman.

Senators. There is no need to recite the history of this great legislative body proud of it though we be not yet to suggest methods which might in coming time enhance its usefulness. The world knows the one and we understand the other.

In a government for and by the people the necessity of clearly defining the rights and limitations of the several branches thereof is manifest. A hundred years has demonstrated the insightfulness and wisdom of the framers of that instrument which has furnished the foundation of our legislative action. The vice president is not one of the makers of the law. His duties are rather to regulate in this body the method of making them to regulate, not in accord with his will and ideas but in accord with rules which your yourselves have established. He is presiding officer to regulate, not to act in conformity with or in schism with proposed regulations. Just as is the

A Heavy Snow Storm Causes Scene of Inauguration to be Held in the Senate Chamber.

Washington, March 4.—The first Chief Executive to take the oath of office in the chamber of the senate in seventy-six years. William Howard Taft, today became President of the United States.

Accompanied to the Capitol by President Roosevelt and a guard of honor through a swirl of blinding snow, Mr. Taft returned to the White House just as the sun began to force its way through the thinning clouds of gray.

Blizzard Overrules Weather Bureau.
A sudden blizzard sweeping in from the Northwest last night to at away the Weather Bureau's optimistic prediction of fair and clear weather caused an abandonment of the outdoor ceremonies on the fun-

Outside the capitol the retiring Chief Executive was met by 200 members of the New York county committee and under their escort was driven to the union station a short three blocks away. A band at the head of the column playing "Auld Lang Syne" told the story of the march and Mr. Roosevelt was compelled again and again to acknowledge the cheers from the throngs which lined the way.

There was a wait of nearly two hours at the station during which Mr. Roosevelt held an impromptu reception in the presidential suite. Many of his old friends among the diplomatic corps sought him there for a final word of farewell.

Roosevelt at Train Thousands Cheer.
As he made his way to the train shortly after 3 o'clock, Mr. Roosevelt was cheered by thousands. To all with whom he spoke Mr. Roosevelt declared that while he had had a busy time while president he was glad to lay down the duties of office. He paid tribute to his successor and especially commented upon the latter's efforts.

Mrs. Taft Center of Interest at Ball.
President and Mrs. Taft were the center of interest at the culminating feature of the memorable day—the inaugural ball—in the Pension Building. The scene in the vast cavern of the building which had been transformed into a canopied court of ivory and white was another of the brilliant in times when it gloriously played host to the gathering of kings and brilliant assemblies from every section of the country. With all the color and movement of a military spectacle with the softening influence of delicately tinted gown and the interest seldom equaled at a social function the inaugural ball holds a place unique in the history-making of the day.

Outdoor Celebration Ends with Fire-Works.
While the ball was in progress outdoors a display of fireworks on the monument to the rear of the White House marked the end of the outdoor celebration. For hours the thin, clouded heavens were alight with screaming rockets with sun clusters that challenged the brilliance of day with fiery comets and all the fantastic creations of modern pyrotechnical skill. Aerial salutes, floated festoons, illuminated balloons and scores of other features made the display visible from one end of the Capitol City to the other.

Leaves Inaugural Ball Late.
Mr. Taft's day was one of continuing cheers and plaudits from the moment he first appeared on the White House portico to go to his inauguration until he returned late tonight an unwilling leave taker from the dancing and the national promenade of the inaugural ball.

Guests of Roosevelts.
Mr. and Mrs. Taft were the guests of the Roosevelts at the White House last night, setting a new precedent in the courtesies of the executive mansion, as they did again today when Mrs. Taft accompanied the newly made president and Mr. Sherman, the new vice president, from the capitol at the head of the imposing parade to the White House.

Indulge in Repartee.
"I knew it would be a cold day when I was made president of the United States," exclaimed Mr. Taft. And I knew there would be a blizzard clear up to the moment I went out of office, rejoined President Roosevelt.

Despite his unflinching good humor, Mr. Taft was deeply disappointed when, upon arriving at the Capitol shortly after 11 o'clock, he found that the committee on arrangements

INAUGURAL ADDRESS DELIVERED BY TAFT

WILL CARRY OUT THE POLICIES OF EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Following are the main points of the inaugural address delivered by President Taft.

To secure the needed speed in the passage of the tariff bill, it would seem wise to attempt no other legislation at the extra session.

A permanent improvement like the Panama Canal should be treated as a distinct enterprise, and should be paid for by the proceeds of bonds the issue of which will distribute its cost between the present and future generations in accordance with its benefits derived.

Our fortifications are yet in a state of only partial completeness and the number of men to man them is insufficient.

A modern navy can not be improvised. It must be built and in existence when the emergency arises which calls for its use and operation. Our international policy is always to promote peace.

Our government is able to afford a suitable army and a suitable navy. By proper legislation we may and ought to place in the hands of the federal executive the means of enforcing the treaty rights of aliens in the courts of the federal government.

The governments of our dependencies in Porto Rico and the Philip-pines are progressing as favorably as could be desired.

I look forward with hope to increasing the already good feeling between the south and the other sections of the country. My chief purpose is to effect a change in the electoral vote of the Southern States.

That is a secondary consideration. The danger of the control of an ignorant electorate has passed.

The colored men must base their

had practically abandoned all hope of an outdoor ceremony.

Late Disappointed.
Mr. Taft said that he was disappointed in the thought which appeared everywhere in the capitol plaza should have their usual share in all view of the inauguration. It was deemed dangerous however to force upon the venerable members of the supreme court the senate and the diplomatic corps the jeopardy of long exposure to the fury of the elements and the president-elect finally acquiesced in the change of program.

As he passed through the senate chamber Mr. Roosevelt was given an ovation quite equal to that tendered to the new president.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT LEAVES WASHINGTON

Bids the Thousands Who Witness His Departure a Happy Farewell.

Washington March 4.—With thousands of his countrymen bidding him an affectionate adieu, Theodore Roosevelt took his departure from the National capital for his Ocala home at 4 o'clock this afternoon. As he was leaving the scene of seven years of strenuous activity, Mr. Roosevelt gave every indication of delight over being relieved of official duties. Looking somewhat tired but happy the former President was deeply moved by the affectionate demonstration in his honor while waiting for his train at the station.

Roosevelt's Farewell.

Goodbye and good luck to you were his farewell greetings to the thousands who witnessed his departure. It was a magnificent spectacle when the great crowd waited for the President in unison and shouted "Good bye, Teddy." Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt occupied a private room on the sleeping car.

All the way from the capitol to the union station where he arrived at 1:30 p. m. Mr. Roosevelt was escorted by the New York County Republican Committee. 800 strong received him on the train. He was greeted with tremendous ovation which he greatly appreciated. A band played "And Lang Syne."

What the matter with Teddy should Representative Herbert Parsons of New York who headed the escort. "He's all right," answered the crowd and three cheers followed. Addressing the escort Mr. Roosevelt said:

I want to thank you heartily for escorting me down to the station and let me say to you how much I appreciate your country. Good bye and good luck to all.

Impromptu Reception.

Then Mr. Roosevelt who was preceded to the station by Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth held an impromptu reception in the president's private room at the depot. All of his former Cabinet officers, members of the diplomatic corps, officials and other admiring friends came there and bade him farewell. Mr. Roosevelt in conversation with friends declared he was glad to give up his arduous duties.

My that was an inaugural address.

DEATH RATE IS GREAT

Lives Lost in Almost Every District in Oklahoma.

Widewater Okla. March 4.—During the past sixty days the death rate in coal mining districts of Oklahoma has been something appalling. Scarcely a day goes by without the news of some new disaster in some of which from one to five men have lost their lives. As an illustration of the part of the mine operators and the alleged criminal neglect of the mine inspectors the accidents Sunday night in the Reed coal mines of Adams County furnished a striking illustration.

It is alleged that two years ago Peter Adamson operating mines at the town of Adams purchased a worn out and discarded engine from some source for the principal reason that it was cheap. After using it some months with continual dissatisfaction several engineers quitting the job because of the danger to the men below he discarded it as worthless. Then the Reed Coal company came in and secured it.

Sunday evening three men who were being let down in the mine were killed because the pulley refused to hold and the cars ran away. These three men left three wives and eighteen children who are absolutely destitute. Three children of one of the dead men are blind and helpless. The widows and orphans of course have refuge in the courts but when the attorney gets his there will be little if any left for those really needing the assistance.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

One Is Dead, the Other in Jail in Ardmore.

Ardmore Okla. March 4.—Joe Wolfenburger a young man whose home was at Marietta Okla. ended his life in a rooming house here late this afternoon by swallowing the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.
Wolfenburger with Elmer Linley of Ardmore both of whom were said to be intoxicated entered into a compact to end their lives. Both young men purchased poison but friends of Linley upon learning of his intentions took the poison from him. He then went to a rooming house and lodged in it. He then procured the poison Linley seized the opportunity and attempted to shoot himself in an effort to carry on his part of the suicide compact.
Wolfenburger's body will be taken to Marietta where his people reside.

Governor Signs Child Labor Bill.
Guthrie Okla. March 4.—Gov. Haskell has signed the Franklin Child Labor bill and another famous and much worked for measure is added to the Oklahoma laws of merit. For this bill Senator Franklin has worked through two sessions of the legislature. He passed such a measure through the first session but Governor Haskell vetoed it on technical grounds.

duty of the supreme court to determine if your action is in accord with the constitution. Two decades of service in this capitol, though not in this chamber, have impressed me with the weight of senatorial responsibility and the value of senatorial duty well done. It is neither well to minimize the former nor exaggerate the latter, but to have both ever in mind.

I am aware that the great burden is on your shoulders, not mine. I do not, however, fail to realize that I have duties to perform which require industry, a clear mind and controlled temper. I shall strive to perform such duties with courtesy, impartiality and fairness.

I am inducted into the vice presidency with appreciation of the dignity and honor of the lofty place and with pleasurable anticipation of close association with men of high ideals and patriotic purpose.

I accept, sir, from your hand the gavel with the earnest hope that I may measure up to the standard you have set, and, if I do, I feel that I shall have met the expectations of the most exacting.

WAIL OF THE RICH

MAN WITH LARGE INCOME HAS HIS TROUBLES.

Supposed by All to Be Dwelling on the Sunny Side of Easy Street Yet He Is Constantly in Debt.

Pity the poor man who has an income of six or eight or ten thousand dollars a year. He has more worries than the man who works for three dollars a day. One of these poor men whose salary is eight thousand was telling his woes to a friend the other day.

"Poor," said he, "I'm as poor as a church mouse. Even if I do get eight thousand a year, I'm in debt, and I've been in debt ever since I can remember. I never have been able to catch up. The general public thinks that a man with an income of twenty-five or thirty dollars a day is blessed. But they haven't an idea of how he is hemmed in and hampered and held in thrall by the very fact that he has an income of that amount.

"Take my daughter's case, for instance. Of course she must have a fine education and every advantage that a father who makes as much money as I do can provide. Did it ever occur to you how much it costs to afford such advantages to a young lady of eighteen or nineteen? I sent my daughter to Vassar, and, as befitting a girl of her age and station in life, I rigged her out with a complete equipment in the way of dress. What do you suppose that girl did? Within two months she put on 23 pounds in weight. Not a thing in her wardrobe would fit her. Well, my wife bought a new outfit complete for her. That girl of ours came home for the Christmas holidays, a few weeks later, with most of her garments held together by strings. She had outgrown even the second lot. Now, I've got to buy a third outfit for her.

"Then there's that young hopeful who's my son and heir—a fine, bright youngster and the joy of the household. He had a minor sort of an ailment lately and it was necessary to perform a slight operation. I have a brother who is the chief examiner in one of the large life insurance companies. He is a bachelor, and he thinks a great deal of my boy. When he heard that my son would have to have an operation he insisted that none but the very best surgeons should have the case. So we got the best surgeon in the city. On account of my brother's position and influence we got him at half rates. We also had several eminent gentlemen in consultation. They charged only half the regular rate. The operation required the administration of ether. My brother, from his long experience, did not deem it safe to have the anaesthetic administered without having my son's heart examined first by a noted heart specialist. He only charged half price. Then my brother would not consent to having the ether given except by a specialist in that line, and of course we had to have the most expert and accomplished of trained nurses. They were the only ones who charged full price.

"My boy's heart was all right. I am delighted to know it on such eminent authority. But I'm afraid mine is not. It has been weak ever since I received those 'half price' bills.

"These are only some of the minor troubles of the poor man who has but eight thousand a year income."

Bright Idea Went Wrong.

The keeper of one of the large hotels in Paris frequented by the poorer classes of guests recently determined to smoke out with sulphur a couple who would not pay their bills and would not leave. Unfortunately, the fumes penetrated to the rest of the building. Exit by the front door was impossible, as the landlord had locked it, and, being stupefied by the fumes, could not remember where he had put the key. The fire brigade eventually arrived and rescued the choking guests, including the offending couple. Now not only those two guests have gone, but many of the others as well, who also have not paid their rents.

Too Much.

"Do you think that Miss Kidder was having fun with me?" asked Chawley. "Well, old chap, give me the details," was Awhur's response. "You see, I had my bull terrier with me. And I said to her, 'That dog knows as much as I do.' And she said 'Don't you think $4.50 was too much for him?'"

Works Well in Other Cases.

Father—I am going to have my children learn Esperanto.
Friend—Is that so? Then I will give you a little advice good for one who wants to learn the new language: Go to the country in which the language is spoken.

Scientifically Studied.

"So there is a war cloud hovering over Europe?" said the diplomat. "Yes," answered the weather expert. "But it's the usual sort. It contains possibilities of atmospheric agitation, but no real thunder and lightning."

The Wise Father.

"I should like to marry your daughter, sir," said the young man. "All right," replied the old man. "Let's get down to business. I'm not going to ask 'Can you support her?' but 'Will you?' That's what I want to know!"—Detroit Free Press.

ADA LOSES; DURANT GETS THE NORMAL

Durant Receives More Than Double the Votes of Ada—Now Ready for the Governor.

A telephone message from Hon. Edgar RATHN just as the News goes to press affords the report of the fact that Ada has finally lost the state normal for all and aye.

Durant's friends forced the vote this afternoon, the same resulting in Durant being awarded the school by the decisive vote of twenty-one (21) for Durant to ten (10) for Ada.

All the republicans voted for Durant except Senator Cunningham of Guthrie.

COUNTY FAIR.

The Pontotoc County Fair was played by home talent last evening under the auspices of the Rebecca lodge to a crowded house at the DeSota theater. The show was well received and the young ladies and members of the Rebeccas are to be congratulated on the funny production and splendid portrayal of what might occur at a county fair.

All the characters participating did superbly.

Special mention is deserved in behalf of all, but space and time forbidding, only the exceptionally well received renditions of the songs by pretty little Pauline Jones of the Harris hotel and gentlemanly young Clay Vaden at the First National Bank. Each in turn was called back by the audience by vociferous cheering.

Affinity With Ahab.

By Rev. S. E. Wishard, D.D.

There are politics and politics. The profession of the politician is old, and has been worked with persistent intrigue, and not infrequently with results quite unexpected. Kings and princes have met with some healthy surprises in their method of working statecraft.

The good King Jehoshaphat had an unexpected experience in his political play with Ahab. He had a good start in his royal career. He had a valuable heredity from his father. Asa turned the kingdom over to his son in good condition, and the son began well. He had no business to begin otherwise. Asa had heard the message of the prophet. He had believed and had put away the abominable idolatry of the heathen, had renewed the altar of Jehovah, had offered the sacrifices required and covenanted anew with God. Jehoshaphat came into this noble inheritance, and took up the responsibilities of government. He wisely distributed his defensive forces, and "sought the Jehovah God of his father"; and God established the kingdom in his hand. The people responded patriotically, bringing him riches and honor. He proceeded further in the destruction of the idols that had cursed the nation, introducing religious teachers. His power and wealth increased and finally became a snare to him. "Now Jehoshaphat had riches and honor in abundance," and joined affinity with Ahab, by taking Athaliah, Ahab's daughter, in marriage to his son Jehoram.

The deadly plague of politics struck the king at the zenith of his power and glory. He would strengthen his kingdom by a political marriage with the family of one of the worst men that ever sat on the throne of Israel. Jehoshaphat could not have been ignorant of the crimes of Ahab, of the unavenged blood that stained his life, and the cloud charged with judgment that hung over his kingdom. And yet with a strange forgetfulness of what God had wrought for him, of the perils of such an unholy alliance, he undertook to strengthen his throne by planting moral dynamite beneath it.

The marriage of Jehoram to Athaliah involved certain social amenities, that must be recognized and fulfilled. This political blunder was the mistake of Jehoshaphat's life. It entailed other blunders, even imperiling his life. Mistakes do not usually travel alone. They go in troops. They never reveal the end from the beginning. The son that captures the unwary com- handsomely attired, with all consequences artfully concealed. Having taken the first step, formed the alliance; having gained affinity with Ahab, Jehoshaphat must visit his new-found ally. And the shrewd Ahab knew how to make the most of the occasion. He made a splendid feast for the coming visitor and his attendants, and when they had eaten to the utmost good nature, he set forth his important proposition before Jehoshaphat. There was a matter-of-fact business back of the proposition. There was a serious conflict looming up in the future between Ahab and the King of Syria, and about to come to an issue over at Ramoth-gilead. Ahab was anxious to secure an investment of Judah's blood in the coming battle. Hence when all appetite had been appeased, and the sense of the obligation of the guests was duly impressed, Ahab asked Jehoshaphat: "Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead?" It was but a little way beyond the Jordan, not very distant from Samaria. The trap had been well set for Judah's king, and he stepped into it with both feet. "He answered, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war." It was another sale of himself and people for a mess of pottage. The political marriage and the great feast had entrapped him, had revealed his folly and stained his reputation.

Jehoshaphat had some twinges of conscience at this point of the proceedings, and proposed to make some inquiries of Jehovah as to whether he had made a safe venture. It was unfortunate that he had not made the time—full of the facts that make him feel how much the world needs his sacrifice and service; to inspire him with a vision of what it would mean for the whole Church to swing in and rush its banner forward everywhere; to teach him where he can take hold with his own hands and where he can lend power to the hands of somebody else, to bring him up at double quick to the help of the Lord in a sudden emergency, to hold him steady with a constant concern in all the wide interests of the incoming kingdom—the Church's power can do this for militant aggressive Christianity, and nothing else can.

There are other factors in the problem, of course, but roughly, the corporate, co-operative efficiency of a church in big united enterprises will be in proportion to the thoroughness with which religious papers circulate information through its membership.

"Information—that's the real franchise for the religious journal. It's all too palpable, however, that the religious press is not doing this solidifying, energizing work very thoroughly in the present-day church. The blame for the failure is twofold:

"The first half of it lies with the papers themselves. They don't live up to their mission. They print too much matter that would be good any time. All the justification of a church periodical publication lies in the matter that wouldn't be as food any other week as it is the week it is printed.

"The second half of the fault lies with local church officers—ministers and lay. They don't believe a newspaper can be divinely called into the Christian ministry. They consider it represents merely a shrewd human scheme to make money by catering to a certain easily accessible class of readers. Therefore they let it make its way like any other commercial undertaking.

"A generation of Christian ministers and elders who believed in the Christian press as a power to bring in the kingdom of God would stop the questioning of the world about the use of it.

"As to any one religious journal that you may have in mind—

"If where it goes it makes Christians want to work, help to go farther; if it doesn't do that, have the nerve to help cure or kill it."

When a young wife discovers that she can't keep up with her piano practice and her husband at the same time she gives up her music.

The newspapers are giving us occasional instances of sudden insanity, produced, as is alleged, by religious enthusiasm. Accounts of revival or evangelistic movements are accompanied with the report of cases in which it is said that religious excitement has unsettled the reason of some one. Under the influence of the irrational impulse, strange acts of violence have been committed. Perhaps the sufferer has been sent to the insane asylum for proper restraint. In two or three recent instances the community has been shocked by atrocious crimes. And because these things have usually occurred at times of special religious interest in the community, it has been argued that the religious teaching was the cause of them.

In a few cases it may be shown that this is the truth of the matter. There are forms of religious excitement, or excitement produced under the guise of religion, which border upon insanity. But the religion taught under such conditions is itself a form of insanity. It is not the gospel of Christ in any true sense. And the insane delusions or performances produced by it are not chargeable to religion.

Dr. David Starr Jordan has recently put to Dr. A. B. Richardson, an expert alienist, of late in charge of the United States Hospital in Washington, some inquiries as to the relation of religion to insanity. Dr. Richardson's replies ought to set at rest any anxiety as to the effect of genuine religion upon the mind. He wrote to Dr. Jordan: "I have tested the matter thoroughly. There are only two patients in this hospital whose insanity has any relation to religion, and I think, from their predisposition to insanity, that they would probably have become insane on some other subject, if they had not on religion. On the other hand, the good cheer, bright hopes, rich consolation, good tempers, regular habits and glad songs of religion are such an antidote for the causes of insanity that thousands of people in Ohio are preserved from insanity by them. But for the beneficent influence of religion, Ohio would have to double the capacity of her hospitals in order to accommodate her insane patients.

Quite in line with this American testimony is the witness of a little book on Christian Sanity, recently published by an English physician, with the recommendation of the Bishop of Durham. The physician examines the meaning of the Scripture word Be Sober, with a study of various manifestations of evil spiritual power among men, like the demoniacal possessions of scripture times, and concludes that there are possibility and danger of similar evil occurrences in the present time, in extravagant revival methods, which are religiously to be avoided. His prudent advice to those concerned in religious activities is: Never surrender consciousness, a sound mind, a good understanding, self-control, a reasonable gentle disposition, and general sanity. There must be sound common-sense in full activity, combined with humility, reverence and submission to God with carefully examine the teaching of any religious leader respecting the person and work of Christ.

There is wisdom for evangelists and religious workers among ourselves in these suggestions. There are spheres of intellectual judgment and spiritual life where false excitement might unsettle reason. But there is no possibility of insanity in spiritual life; the gift of God is Christ. Nor does any one who sincerely receives Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Lord become insane thereby. The sorrowful instances of aberration which sometimes occur, chargeable, as is alleged, to religious excitement, may not be charged to the simple gospel of Jesus Christ, Healer and Saviour. Rather will that gospel be the healing of many a hurt and troubled mind, the source of peace and perfect soundness of body and spirit which are His.

JUDGE HART SAID HE WOULD, USE EVERY EFFORT TO MAKE THE CASE MOVE MORE RAPIDLY.

The state this afternoon had a post erected at the spot on which stood the second telephone pole at the scene of the tragedy. This pole was cut down soon after the murder. The new pole was erected to get a photograph which the state will try to put before the jury.

JURY WANTS COURT TO HURRY UP.

Nashville, March 4.—When court adjourned tonight in the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of former Senator E. W. Carmack, after a day marked by little progress and much wrangling between attorneys, the jury sent word to Judge Hart through a bailiff that "they had a complaint to make." The court called up one of their number—William Hows. The latter said: "Most of the jurors are farmers. The time for spring planting is here. We want to get home. The entire crop for the year depends upon the planting. We feel that there are too many delays and too much argument. We ask the court to hurry things along. We would be glad to have night sessions and work longer during the day. But we want to get through and get through soon."

VICE PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Sort but to the Point—He Briefly States Duties of Presiding Officer in Senate.

Washington, March 4.—The inaugural address of Vice President Sherman.

Senators. There is no need to retrace the history of this great legislative body proud of it though we have not yet suggested methods which might in coming time enhance its usefulness. The world knows the one and we understand the other.

In a government for and by the people the necessity of clearly defining the rights and limitations of the several branches of government is manifest. A hundred years has demonstrated the wisdom of the framers of that instrument which has furnished the foundation of our legislative action. The vice president is not one of the makers of the law. His duties are rather to regulate in this body the method of making them to regulate, not in accord with his will and ideas but in accord with rules which you yourselves have established. It is the presiding officer to regulate to act in conformity with the established regulations just as it is the

A Heavy Snow Storm Causes Scene of Inauguration to be Held in the Senate Chamber.

Washington, March 4.—The first Chief Executive to take the oath of office in the chamber of the senate in seventy-seven years. William Howard Taft, today became President of the United States.

Accompanied to the Capitol by President Roosevelt and a guard of honor through a swirl of blinding snow Mr. Taft returned to the White House just as the sun began to force its way through the thinning clouds of gray.

Blizzard Overrules Weather Bureau.
A sudden blizzard sweeping in from the Northwest last night to set away the Weather Bureau's optimistic prediction of fair and clear weather caused an abandonment of the outdoor ceremonies on the front

Outside the capitol the retiring Chief Executive was met by 200 members of the New York county committee and under their escort was driven to the union station a short three blocks away. A band at the head of the column playing "Auld Lang Syne" told the story of the march and Mr. Roosevelt was compelled again and again to acknowledge the cheers from the throngs which lined the way.

There was a wait of nearly two hours at the station during which Mr. Roosevelt held an impromptu reception in the presidential suite. Many of his old friends among the diplomatic corps sought him there for a final word of farewell.

Roosevelt at Train Thousands Cheer.
As he made his way to the train shortly after 3 o'clock Mr. Roosevelt was cheered by thousands. To all with whom he spoke Mr. Roosevelt declared that while he had had a busy time while president he was glad to lay down the duties of office. He paid tribute to his successor and especially commented upon the latter's efforts.

Mrs. Taft Center of Interest at Ball.
President and Mrs. Taft were the centers of interest in the culminating feature of the memorable day—the inaugural ball—in the Pension Building. The scene in the vast arena of the building which had been transformed into a crowded court of ivory and white was another of the brilliant pictures which are continually pictured here by the turning of eyes and brilliant assemblage from every section of the country. With all the color and movement of a military spectacle with the softening influence of delicately tinted gown and the interest seldom equalled at a social function the inaugural ball holds a place unique in the history-making of the day.

Outdoor Celebration Ends with Fireworks.
While the ball was in progress outdoors a display of fireworks on the monument to the rear of the White House marked the end of the outdoor celebration. For hours the thin clouds of smoke were alight with screaming rockets with sun clusters that challenged the brilliance of day with fiery comets and all the fantastic creations of modern pyrotechnical skill. Aerial salutes, floated festoons, illuminated balloons and scores of other features made the display visible from one end of the Capitol City to the other.

Leaves Inaugural Ball Late.
Mr. Taft's day was one of continuing cheers and plaudits from the moment he first appeared on the White House porch to go to his inauguration until he returned late tonight an unwilling leave taker from the dancing and the national promenade of the inaugural ball.

Guests of Roosevelts.
Mr. and Mrs. Taft were the guests of the Roosevelts at the White House last night, setting a new precedent in the histories of the executive mansion, as they did again today when Mrs. Taft accompanied the newly made president and Mr. Sherman, the new vice president, from the capitol at the head of the imposing parade to the White House.

Indulge in Repartee.
"I knew it would be a cold day when I was made president of the United States," exclaimed Mr. Taft. And I knew there would be a blizzard clear up to the moment I went out of office, rejoined President Roosevelt.

Despite his unfailing good humor, Mr. Taft was deeply disappointed when, upon arriving at the Capitol shortly after 11 o'clock, he found that the committee on arrangements

INAUGURAL ADDRESS DELIVERED BY TAFT

WILL CARRY OUT THE POLICIES OF EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Following are the main points of the inaugural address delivered by President Taft.

To secure the needed speed in the passage of the tariff bill, it would seem wise to attempt no other legislation at the extra session.

A permanent improvement like the Panama Canal should be treated as a distinct enterprise, and should be paid for by the proceeds of bonds the issue of which will distribute its cost between the present and future generations in accordance with the benefits derived.

Our fortifications are yet in a state of only partial completeness and the number of men to man them is insufficient.

A modern navy can not be improvised. It must be built and in existence when the emergency arises which calls for its use and operation.

Our international policy is always to promote peace.

Our government is able to afford a suitable army and a suitable navy. By proper legislation we may and ought to place in the hands of the federal executive the means of enforcing the treaty rights of aliens in the courts of the federal government.

The governments of our dependencies in Porto Rico and the Philippines are progressing as favorably as could be desired.

I look forward with hope to increasing the already good feeling between the south and the other sections of the country. My chief purpose is to effect a change in the electoral vote of the Southern States. That is a secondary consideration.

The danger of the control of an ignorant electorate has passed.

The colored men must base their

had practically abandoned all hope of an outdoor ceremony.

Taft Disappointed.

Mr. Taft said that he was disappointed that the great American people represented in the throngs which surrounded everywhere in the capitol plaza should have their usual share in a view of the inauguration. It was deemed dangerous however to force upon the venerable members of the supreme court, the senate and the diplomatic corps the exposure of long exposure to the fury of the elements and the president-elect finally acquiesced in the change of program.

He was one of the most popular men sent to preside over the federal courts in this country.

Previous to his appointment as federal judge here in 1897 by President McKinley he served as United States congressman from Colorado. He was re-appointed judge by President Roosevelt in 1901, and again in 1905, serving until his office was abolished with the admission of Oklahoma to statehood. Taft and Sherman Review Parade.
By almost superhuman efforts a passageway was cleared along the center of Pennsylvania avenue however and for nearly three hours President Taft and Vice President Sherman reviewed a passing column which was replete with martial splendor and picturesque display.

Following the brilliant and impressive ceremonies in the senate during which both the president and vice president took the oath of office President Roosevelt—again a private citizen—bade an affectionate adieu to his successor while all in the historic chamber looked on in silence and then passed away through a side door to take the train for New York. As he passed through the senate chamber Mr. Roosevelt was given an ovation quite equal to that tendered to the new president.

duty of the supreme court to determine if your action is in accord with the constitution. Two decades of service in this capitol, though not in this chamber, have impressed me with the weight of senatorial responsibility and the value of senatorial duty well done. It is neither well to minimize the former nor exaggerate the latter, but to have both ever in mind.
I am aware that the great burden is on your shoulders, not mine. I do not, however, fail to realize that I have duties to perform which require industry, a clear mind and controlled temper. I shall strive to perform such duties with courtesy, impartiality and fairness.
I am inducted into the vice presidency with appreciation of the dignity and honor of the lofty place and with pleasurable anticipation of close association with men of high ideals and patriotic purpose.
I accept, sir, from your hand the gavel with the earnest hope that I may measure up to the standard you have set, and, if I do, I feel that I shall have met the expectations of the most exacting.

WAIL OF THE RICH

MAN WITH LARGE INCOME HAS HIS TROUBLES.

Supposed by All to Be Dwelling on the Sunny Side of Easy Street Yet He is Constantly in Debt.

Pity the poor man who has an income of six or eight or ten thousand dollars a year. He has more worries than the man who works for three dollars a day. One of these poor men whose salary is eight thousand was telling his woes to a friend the other day.

"Poor," said he, "I'm as poor as a church mouse. Even if I do get eight thousand a year, I'm in debt, and I've been in debt ever since I can remember. I never have been able to catch up. The general public thinks that a man with an income of twenty-five or thirty dollars a day is blessed. But they haven't an idea of how he is hemmed in and hampered and held in thrall by the very fact that he has an income of that amount.

"Take my daughter's case, for instance. Of course she must have a fine education and every advantage that a father who makes as much money as I do can provide. Did it ever occur to you how much it costs to afford such advantages to a young lady of eighteen or nineteen? I sent my daughter to Vassar, and, as befitting a girl of her age and station in life, I rigged her out with a complete equipment in the way of dress. What do you suppose that girl did? Within two months she put on 23 pounds in weight. Not a thing in her wardrobe would fit her. Well, my wife bought a new outfit complete for her. That girl of ours came home for the Christmas holidays, a few weeks later, with most of her garments held together by strings. She had outgrown even the second lot. Now, I've got to buy a third outfit for her.

"Then there's that young hopeful who's my son and heir—a fine, bright youngster and the joy of the household. He had a minor sort of an ailment lately and it was necessary to perform a slight operation. I have a brother who is the chief examiner in one of the large life insurance companies. He is a bachelor, and he thinks a great deal of my boy. When he heard that my son would have to have an operation he insisted that none but the very best surgeons should have the case. So we got the best surgeon in the city. On account of my brother's position and influence we got him at half rates. We also had several eminent gentlemen in consultation. They charged only half the regular rate. The operation required the administration of ether. My brother, from his long experience, did not deem it safe to have the anaesthetic administered without having my son's heart examined first by a noted heart specialist. He only charged half price. Then my brother would not consent to having the ether given except by a specialist in that line, and of course we had to have the most expert and accomplished of trained nurses. They were the only ones who charged full price.

"My boy's heart was all right. I am delighted to know it on such eminent authority. But I'm afraid mine is not. It has been weak ever since I received those 'half price' bills.
"These are only some of the minor troubles of the poor man who has but eight thousand a year income."

Bright Idea Went Wrong.

The keeper of one of the large hotels in Paris frequented by the poorer classes of guests recently determined to smoke out with sulphur a couple who would not pay their bills and would not leave. Unluckily, the fumes penetrated to the rest of the building. Exit by the front door was impossible, as the landlord had locked it, and, being stupefied by the fumes, could not remember where he had put the key. The fire brigade eventually arrived and rescued the choking guests, including the offending couple. Now not only those two guests have gone, but many of the others as well, who also have not paid their rents.

Too Much.

"Do you think that Miss Kidder was having fun with me?" asked Chawley. "Well, old chap, give me the details," was Awhthur's response.
"You see, I had my bull terrier with me. And I said to her, 'That dog knows as much as I do.' And she said 'Don't you think $4.50 was too much for him?'"

Works Well in Other Cases.

Father—I am going to have my children learn Esperanto.
Friend—Is that so? Then I will give you a little advice good for one who wants to learn the new language: Go to the country in which the language is spoken.

Scientifically Studied.

"So there is a war cloud hovering over Europe?" said the diplomat. "Yes," answered the weather expert. "But it's the usual sort. It contains possibilities of atmospheric agitation, but no real thunder and lightning."

The Wise Father.

"I should like to marry your daughter, sir," said the young man. "All right," replied the old man. "Let's get down to business. I'm not going to ask 'Can you support her?' but 'Will you?' That's what I want to know!"—Detroit Free Press.

The show was well received and the young ladies and members of the Rebecca are to be congratulated on the funny production and splendid portrayal of what might occur at a county fair.

All the characters participating did superbly.

Especially mention is deserved in behalf of all, but space and time forbidding, only the exceptionally well received renditions of the songs by pretty little Pauline Jones of the Harris hotel and gentlemanly young Clay Vaden at the First National Bank. Each in turn was called back by the audience by vociferous cheering.

Affinity With Ahab.

By Rev. S. E. Wishard, D.D.

There are politics and politics. The profession of the politician is old, and has been worked with persistent intrigue, and not infrequently with results quite unexpected. Kings and princes have met with some healthy surprises in their method of working statecraft.

The good King Jehoshaphat had an unexpected experience in his political play with Ahab. He had a good start in his royal career. He had a valuable heredity from his father. Aha turned the kingdom over to his son in good condition, and the son began well. He had no business to begin otherwise. Aha had heard the message of the prophet. He had believed and had put away the abominable idolatry of the heathen, had renewed the altar of Jehovah, had offered the sacrifices required and covenanted anew with God. Jehoshaphat came into this noble inheritance, and took up the responsibilities of government. He wisely distributed his defensive forces, and "sought the Jehovah God of his father"; and God established the kingdom in his hand. The people responded patriotically, bringing him riches and honor. He proceeded further in the destruction of the idols that had cursed the nation, introducing religious teachers. His power and wealth increased and finally became a snare to him. "Now Jehoshaphat had riches and honor in abundance," and joined affinity with Ahab," by taking Athalia, Ahab's daughter, in marriage to his son Jehoram.

The deadly plague of politics struck the king at the zenith of his power and glory. He strength with his kingdom by a political marriage with the family of one of the worst men that ever sat on the throne of Israel. Jehoshaphat could not have been ignorant of the crimes of Ahab, of the unavenged blood that stained his life, and the cloud charged with judgment that hung over his kingdom. And yet with a strange forgetfulness of what God had wrought for him, of the perils of such an unholy alliance, he undertook to strengthen his throne by planting moral dynamite beneath it.

The marriage of Jehoram to Athalia involved certain social amenities, that must be recognized and fulfilled. This political blunder was the mistake of Jehoshaphat's life." It entailed other blunders, even imperiling his life. Mistakes do not usually travel alone. They go in troops. They never reveal the end from the beginning. The son that captures the unwary ear, handsomely attired, with all consequences artfully concealed. Having taken the first step, formed the alliance; having gained affinity with Ahab, Jehoshaphat must visit his new-found ally. And the shrewd Ahab knew how to make the most of the occasion. He made a splendid feast for the coming visitor and his attendants, and when they had eaten to the utmost good nature, he set forth his important proposition before Jehoshaphat. There was a matter-of-fact business back of the proposition. There was a serious conflict looming up in the future between Ahab and the King of Syria, and about to come to an issue over at Ramoth-gilead. Ahab was anxious to secure an investment of Judean blood in the coming battle. Hence when all appetite had been appeased, and the sense of the obligation of the guests was duly impressed, Ahab asked Jehoshaphat: "Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead?" It was but a little way beyond the Jordan, not very distant from Samaria. The trap had been well set for Judah's king, and he stepped into it with both feet. "He answered, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war." It was another sale of himself and people for a mess of pottage. The political marriage and the great feast had entrapped him, had revealed his folly and stained his reputation.

Jehoshaphat had some twinges of conscience at this point of the proceedings, and proposed to make some inquiries of Jehovah as to whether he had made a safe venture. It was unfortunate that he had not made the plan—full of the facts that make him feel how much the world needs his sacrifice and service; to inspire him with a vision of what it would mean for the whole Church to swing in and rush its banner forward everywhere; to teach him where he can take hold with his own hands and where he can lend power to the hands of somebody else, to bring him up at double quick to the help of the Lord in a sudden emergency, to hold him steady with a constant concern in all the affairs of the coming kingdom—the Church's paper can do this for him; but aggressive Christianity, and nothing else can.

There are other factors in the problem, of course, but roughly, the corporate, co-operative efficiency of a Church in big united enterprises will be in proportion to the thoroughness with which religious papers circulate information through its membership.

Information—that's the real franchise for the religious journal.

"It's all too palpable, however, that the religious press is not doing this solidifying, energizing work very thoroughly in the present-day church. The blame for the failure is twofold:

"The first half of it lies with the papers themselves. They don't live up to their mission. They print too much matter that would be good any time. All the justification of a church periodical publication lies in the matter that wouldn't be as food any other week as it is the week it is printed.

"The second half of the fault lies with local church officers—ministers and lay. They don't believe a newspaper can be divinely called into the Christian ministry. The consider it represents merely a shrewd human scheme to make money by catering to a certain easily accessible class of readers. Therefore they let it make its way like any other commercial undertaking.

"A generation of Christian ministers and elders who believed in the Christian press as a power to bring in the kingdom of God would stop the questioning of the world about the use of it.

"As to any one religious journal that you may have in mind—

"If where it goes it makes Christians want to work, help it go farther; if it doesn't do that, have the nerve to help cure or kill it."

The newspapers are giving us occasional instances of sudden insanity, produced, as is alleged, by religious enthusiasm. Accounts of revival or evangelistic movements are accompanied with the report of cases in which it is said that religious excitement has unsettled the reason of some one. Under the influence of the irrational impulse, strange acts of violence have been committed. Perhaps the sufferer has been sent to the insane asylum for proper restraint. In two or three recent instances the community has been shocked by atrocious crimes. And because these things have usually occurred at times of special religious interest in the community, it has been argued that the religious teaching was the cause of them.

In a few cases it may be shown that this is the truth of the matter. There are forms of religious excitement, or excitement produced under the guise of religion, which border upon insanity. But the religion taught under such conditions is itself a form of insanity. It is not the gospel of Christ in any true sense. And the insane delusions or performances produced by it are not chargeable to religion.

Dr. David Starr Jordan has recently put to Dr. A. B. Richardson, an expert alienist, of late in charge of the United States Hospital in Washington, some inquiries as to the relation of religion to insanity. Dr. Richardson's replies ought to set at rest any anxiety as to the effect of genuine religion upon the mind. He wrote to Dr. Jordan: "I have tested the matter thoroughly. There are only two patients in this hospital whose insanity has any relation to religion, and I think, from their predisposition to insanity, that they would probably have become insane on some other subject. If they had not on religion. On the other hand, the good cheer, bright hopes, rich consolation, good tempers, regular habits and glad songs of religion are such an antidote for the causes of insanity that thousands of people in Ohio are preserved from insanity by them. But for the beneficent influence of religion, Ohio would have to double the capacity of her hospitals in order to accommodate her insane patients.

Quite in line with this American testimony is the witness of a little book on Christian Sanity, recently published by an English physician, with the recommendation of the Bishop of Durham. The physician examines the meaning of the Scripture word Be Sober, with a study of various manifestations of evil spiritual power among men, like the demoniacal possessions of scripture time, and concludes that there are possibility and danger of similar evil occurrences in the present time, in extravagant revival methods, which are religiously to be avoided. His practical advice to those concerned in religious activities is: Never surrender consciousness; a sound mind, a good understanding, self-control, a reasonable gentle disposition, and general sanity. There must be sound common-sense in all activity, combined with humility, reverence and submission to God's will. Carefully examine the teaching of any religious leader respecting the Person and work of Christ.

There is wisdom for evangelists and religious workers among ourselves in these suggestions. There are spheres of intellectual judgment and spiritual life where false excitement might unsettle reason. But there is no possibility of purity in spiritual life, the gift of God is Christ. Nor does any one who sincerely receives Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Lord become insane thereby. The sorrowful instances of aberration which sometimes occur, chargeable, as is alleged, to religious excitement, may not be charged to the simple gospel of Jesus Christ, Healer and Saviour. Rather will that gospel be the healing of many a hurt and troubled mind, the source of peace and perfect soundness of body and spirit which are His.

JURY WANTS COURT TO HURRY UP.

Nashville, March 4.—When court adjourned tonight in the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of former Senator E. W. Carmack, after a day marked by little progress and much wrangling between attorneys, the jury sent word to Judge Hart through a bailiff that "they had a complaint to make." The court called up one of their number—William Hays. The latter said: "Most of the jurors are farmers. The time for spring planting is here. We want to get home. The entire crop for the year depends upon the planting. We feel that there are too many delays and too much argument. We ask the court to hurry things along. We would be glad to have night sessions and work longer during the day. But we want to get through and get through soon."

Judge Hart said he would use every effort to make the case move more rapidly.

The state this afternoon had a post erected at the spot on which stood the second telephone pole at the scene of the tragedy. This pole was cut down soon after the murder. The new pole was erected to get a photograph which the state will try to put before the jury.
